and Others Against The Occupation and for Social Justice

This Friday, June 13th, (03) there will be a pride parade in Jerusalem. The parade is organized under the title "love without borders". Particularly in Jerusalem, there seems to be an unintended irony behind this title. Jerusalem, the second poorest city in Israel, a city in which a majority of ultra-orthodox Jews, Palestinians and working class people all live in poverty, separated and afraid of each other, a divided and occupied city in which soldiers march in the streets in search of anyone darker than what they accept.

"Black Laundry" will march with the parade, but we will try to remind the participants that borders always exist within us and we participate in creating them, and therefore we also have the responsibility to fight them and shatter them to pieces.

Please join us, we will meet at Safra Square, 11:30, June 13th.
Come dressed in black or whichever way you fancy.

The flyer text:

Love without borders.

Ignoring the borders will not erase them. Borders of poverty, of occupation and of social divisions surround us wherever we go, cutting into the flesh. Our ethnicity stops being a source of pride and becomes an asphyxiating disadvantage. Rules of gender and sexuality prevent us from being who we are and loving whomever we choose to love; the diversity of biological species is locked behind the bars of cages in which other animals are held captive.

Borders always surround us. But we can climb over them, we can gnaw at them, we can escape or help others escape through the barbed wire, trick the guards and paint the walls with graffiti. We must fight: because every wall surrounds someone who is chained, someone who is our ally in struggle, in love and in liberation.

Cross the borders of gender
Betray the borders of nationality
Overcome the borders of biological species
Break through the borders of racial oppression
Wax the hairs off the borders of good taste
Perform cosmetic surgery on the limitations of "beauty"
Hospitalize the borders of "mental health"
